

About Marcia

Marcia James, when she isn't penning romantic comedies with elements of mystery and suspense, is a freelance video scriptwriter and advertising copywriter. In addition to developing marketing and promotional materials, she writes romance articles for her local weekly newspaper. After years of dealing with such sexy topics as how to safely install traffic lights, Marcia is enjoying "researching" and plotting steamy love scenes for her romance novels with her husband and hero of many years.

Marcia "discovered" romance novels less than ten years ago, but quickly went from an appreciative reader of the genre to an aspiring author of the feel-good books. She joined Romance Writers of America (RWA) and her local RWA chapter, Central Ohio Fiction Writers (COFW), in 1999. Her manuscripts finaled in eleven writing contests before her second one sold to Cerridwen Press.

In her spare time, Marcia enjoys volunteering for non-profit organizations. One of the benefits is networking with celebrities. Thanks to her involvement with good causes, Marcia asked the guests at her 1989 wedding to donate to charity vs. buying gifts. Word of the "non-profit wedding reception" reached People Magazine, which covered the event.

Though much was donated, they shouldered some expenses, like food and liquor.

Marcia & James Marry For Money -- The Dollars Their Guests Gave to Charity